

June 27, 2018

Brennan Lynn Keegan
Religion
Duke University

Dear Professor Keegan:

Congratulations! You are one of our top instructors. Teaching excellence is at the core of Duke's mission, and each semester, the Trinity College Office of Assessment administers course evaluations to document this component of our students' experience. During the 2018 spring semester, in the categories of Overall Quality of Course and/or Overall Quality of Instructor, your course evaluations for at least one course were among the top 5% of all undergraduate instructors teaching in the Humanities.

For your information, percentiles were calculated based on each course's divisional designation and category of student enrollment (i.e., small [1-18], medium [19-49], or large [50 and above]). Thus, your evaluation results were compared to those of your faculty peers teaching like courses. Eligibility for this recognition also requires that you receive five or more student evaluations across all your eligible courses in the term, and that your overall return rate meets or exceeds 25%.

Your commitment to teaching, dedication to students, and creative approach toward innovation or traditional methods of instruction have been recognized by your students through these course evaluations. Together with your students, we recognize the value of your dedication and applaud your efforts. Professors like you enable us to build upon our academic traditions by infusing instruction with a sense of dynamic engagement and inspired learning. We wish you continued success.

Sincerely,

Arlie O. Petters, Ph.D.
Dean of Academic Affairs for Trinity College of Arts and Sciences
Associate Vice Provost for Undergraduate Education
Benjamin Powell Professor of Mathematics
Professor of Physics and Economics

email cc: David Morgan, Religion
Marc Goodacre, Religion